TRAINING BEYOND THINKING

When we talk about access to the source of knowing, we talk about access to the resources of the unconscious and utilizing them in daily work and life. We are actually using these resources of the unconscious all the time as we communicate on an energy level, although mostly unconsciously and therefore leaving the information of that level unused.

For example, people are talking about a gut feeling, intuition, "I thought I should call you and you called", "I entered the room and felt there was something going on." Mostly we don't do anything with these feelings and our lives continue. But what if we didn't? What would happen if we learnt how to utilize these resources in our everyday lives?

In order to achieve meaningful success in life, from personal to business, on-going personal growth and development is critical. But how does one tap into the powerful resources hidden in all of us in order to achieve our goals and attain the success we desire?

Roho Ya Chui uses photography and its powerful visual language to give participants the key, the manual and the guidance throughout the whole process of access and utilization of the resources of the unconscious. The training guides the participants through the quantum leap from thinking to knowing.
